HAPPY TOURS

Foundation & our sustainability pledge

We are convinced that the real power of Tourism lies in its ability to educate, to open horizons and to influence a change for the better in individual's lives - but only if it serves the community that tourists visit in a sustainable way.

In order to lead by example, we have set up a Foundation to support a regeneration programme through sustainable development in the war-torn village of Ličko Petrovo Selo in Croatia, situated in the direct vicinity of the famous Plitvice lakes, one of the first UNESCO sites in south-east Europe. There we have purposely built and opened a modern 4* hotel with a vision of offering sustainable employment and opportunity in an ecologically low imprint facility.

THIS IS WHAT WE ARE DOING:

- We support ecological practises in the hotel, trying to make as little ecological impact as possible and with a goal of offsetting our carbon waste by replanting and nurturing the forests that surround us.
- We are employing all the three communities in mixed teams (Croatian, Serbian and Muslim, representing also three religions: catholic, orthodox and muslim) thus making a statement that co-operation across the divide is once again a possibility.
- Rather than relying on outside chefs, the hotel kitchen is run by local women. They have always been good cooks but are now, for the first time, bringing their delicious specialties to a wider audience of international guests.
- Our food is locally sourced wherever possible, supporting local farmers and producers. Even our local drink, rakia, has been produced after a combined effort of hotel staff and villagers to forage and collect the fruit necessary for its production.

- Our gift shop supports small local producers and craftspeople and is unique in the region.
- We support local arts and crafts made by an association of senior villagers, and, in partnership with them, give our hotel guests an insight into the life and story of the village and its peoples.
- We have worked with community groups to create unique activities and excursions for hotel guests, thereby contributing to the economic growth of the village.
- We are committed to passing on a part of the proceeds of all hotel bookings towards the reviving of facilities in the village and the surrounds.

We believe our actions are delivering an example of the Power of Tourism to serve the community, to give back and to change things and lives for the better. We will continue to embrace sustainable tourism practises, and move, as fast as possible, towards a truly sustainable future.
